When crossing from Queensland into the Northern Territory you need to put your clocks back ½ hour. Neither place has daylight saving. South Australia and the Northern Territory usually share the same time, except from October-March, SA is 1hr ahead. If crossing from Western Australia into the Northern Territory add one and a half hours.

WELCOME TO THE BARKLY

Take your time travelling through this region, it is a great place to slow your pace, take in the vast surroundings and enjoy the peaceful sound of the wind through the gumtrees, or whistling around the spinifex grass. There are plenty of opportunities to spot local wildlife with a stunning array of bird life so you can take beautiful photos.

It is a timeless landscape, which invites you to take your time. Have a yarn with the locals, there is always someone to chat with, whether a fellow traveller at a rest stop, or a local at the bar!

Whether you travel the bitumen highways, or go off-road on the Binns Track, you will find yourself in locations with no mobile or internet service, a disadvantage to some in the modern world, but a blessing for all those who long to switch off, to take in the surroundings and bask in the sunshine of our beautiful seasons.

TENNANT CREEK

Tennant Creek is the main centre of the Barkly Region, located on Warumungu Country. People from nearby communities have moved into town over time, making it a place where twelve Aboriginal languages are spoken.

Though the town’s history is brief—born from the last major gold rush of the 1930s—local Aboriginal people still practise traditional lore and customs.

You’ll find a vibrant and welcoming community. The “Golden Heart” title, first earned during the mining boom, now reflects the generous spirit of its people.

This region encourages a slower pace. Take in the wide-open spaces, the sound of breeze through gumtrees and spinifex, and the chance to see native wildlife. It’s also a great place for photography.

The landscape has a timeless feel that invites you to linger. Stop for a yarn—there’s always someone to talk to, whether it’s a traveller or a local at the bar.

Whether driving the highway or heading off-road along the Binns Track, expect areas with no mobile or internet—unusual in today’s world, but ideal for those wanting to unplug and enjoy the sun and scenery.

Fuel stops are far apart in the NT, so refuel whenever you can.

Mobile signal fades quickly outside of towns. Download maps, guides, and fact sheets in advance. Look for Wi-Fi at remote tourist stops, or use one of these data signal boosters along the way!

TRAVEL WITH PETS KEEP A LOOK OUT!

New to Australia, Ehrlichiosis is a dangerous dog disease, carried by brown ticks found across northern Australia. Left untreated, it can be fatal, so please use tick prevention to keep your dog safe.

PREVENTION MEDICATIONS

- Internal medicines will kill any ticks on your dog. Just be mindful that if infected, it is that tickbite which infects your dog! Ehrlichiosis isn't passed simply from dog to dog, it spreads through the ticks.
- The first line of defence is a fresh tick repellent collar. Note the date and change as required. Most collars work best when kept dry.
- Regularly inspect your dog. Ticks hide in small crevices: inside ears, between toes and under their paws, between the pads.
- When travelling north, ask your vet about Heartworm prevention.
- Heartworm is spread by mosquitos. Protection is available via an annual needle or monthly tablets.

Vet Renee de Clifford with Brownie

PET TRAVEL TIPS

- Carry your pet's medical info, including vaccination records.
- Ensure your pet is harnessed or crated in the car.
- Carry extra water & bowls to allow for the heat.
- Remember heat affects their paws as well. Be mindful of hot ground!
- Take care when out bush, baits are used to protect stock in the NT.

Tennant Creek Overland Telegraph Station

OVERLAND TELEGRAPH STATION

Tennant Creek Overland Telegraph Station was completed in 1872, so be on the lookout for 150th Anniversary celebrations! Located near the actual Tennant Creek watercourse, 12km north of town, this heritage site offers visitors an insight into the early living and working conditions of the employees.

The single copper wire, running from Adelaide to Darwin, a mighty 3600km long was the only communication link between Australia and England. This was strung along a path mapped by intrepid explorer, John McDouall Stuart, after whom the highway is named.

Take the self-guided walk around the reserve if you pick up a key and information sheet is available at the Visitor Information Centre (deposit required) and explore the historic station buildings made of local stone.

On a walk through the station buildings, you'll also learn of the discovery of gold in the area in 1925 and how thousands flocked to Tennant Creek. Explore at your own pace the interesting interpretive signage explaining the use of such rooms as the The Cellar, The Smoke House and in other buildings the Blacksmiths Workshop. A 100m stroll you will discover the Cemetery, the resting place of pioneers of the past.

KUNJARRA/THE PEBBLES

Kunjarra is the Warumungu traditional name for The Pebbles, an outcrop of red granite boulders smaller than the Devils Marbles. Signage explains the traditional customs here, and walking paths guide you to wander between the clumps of boulders, enjoying the colours of the rocks. Best viewed when the sun is low in the sky, at sunrise or sunset, to get the richest red colours in the boulders. Enjoy a picnic at the tables here, with toilets onsite. Overnight camping is NOT allowed for cultural reasons.

Kunjarra / The Pebbles

Ted Ryko Bike Path and Tingkarli/Lake Mary Ann

TED RYKO BIKE PATH

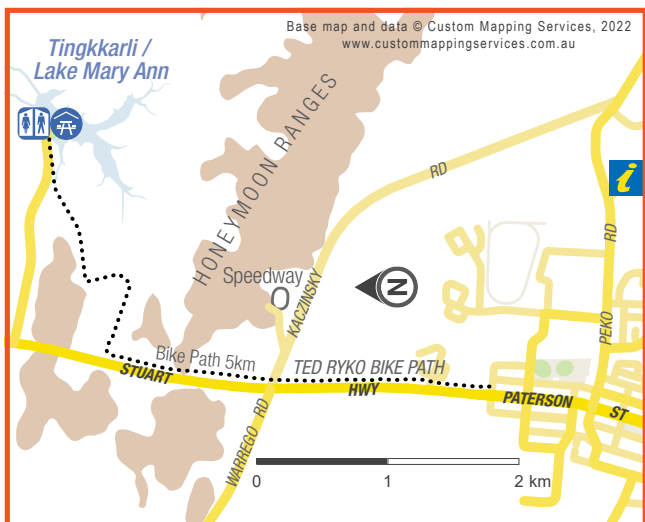

The Bicycle Path which leads from Tennant Creek, through the hills of the Honeymoon Range, and out to Tingkarli/Lake Mary Ann, is named after Ted Ryko (full name Eddie Reichenbach) who set the unbroken bicycle record from Adelaide to Darwin back in 1914. This arduous journey took him just 28 days! Walkers and cyclists enjoy the path which meanders through the hilly range, offering sights of local birds and wildlife. A quiet walker may see beautiful lizards crossing the path.

TINGKKARLI/LAKE MARY ANN

A lovely recreational watercourse, constructed by the NT Government in 1980. The dam wall closes off a valley which fills from the catchment area of Mary Ann Creek. Non-powered water sports are enjoyed here, such as swimming and kayaking. The view across the lake can be enjoyed from lush green lawns, with shady trees, BBQs and picnic tables, along with a fabulous new playground area. Take the walk around the lake to enjoy the natural bushland on the other side.

SOUTH OF TENNANT CREEK

EXPLORERS WAY

KARLU KARLU / DEVILS MARBLES

100kms south of Tennant Creek, Karlu Karlu is the traditional Aboriginal name for Devils Marbles, the most famous landscape of the Barkly Region. Historically, this site was a meeting point for four neighbouring Aboriginal language groups, Warumungu, Kaytetye, Alyawarre and Warlpiri.

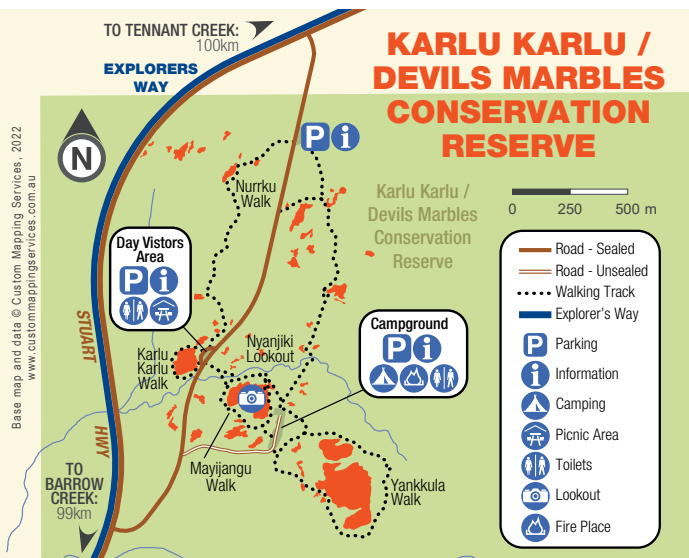

There are many traditional stories attached to this landscape, but the one offered for visitors is that a spiritual devil man, Arranji, walked through the valley spinning hair strings, important to men's cultural ceremonies, dropping them to the ground which then formed into the boulders which lay in clumps, precariously balanced upon each other.

Local people believe that the spirit of Arranji remains resting at Ayleparrarntenhe, a twin peaked hill to the east of the public reserve.

A more modern story of this place involves Rev. John Flynn, founder of the Royal Flying Doctor Service. In the early 1950s, his ashes were buried on Larapinta Road, west of Alice Springs, and a boulder from Karlu Karlu was placed on a plinth in his honor. The boulder has since been returned and is now a noticeably different colour.

FLOCKING TO THE BARKLY REGION

The Barkly region is a treat for all bird enthusiasts. With little water to the south and the tropics to the north, this region is a transitional area for many unique birds.

Take the time to explore a few key areas of interest including the Tennant Creek Water Waste Treatment Plant, via Fazeldeen Road. You could be lucky to see a huge variety of birds.

Other species are found at Lake Maryann, just a few kms south of Tennant Creek. In the hill area as you drive in, keep a look out for the Painted Finch, Crimson Chat, Spinifex bird, Spinifex pigeon and the Dusky Grass wren can be found in the rocky outcrops and as you get closer to the water.

Renner Springs north of Tennant Creek, to the south Karlu Karlu/Devils Marbles and Iltwelepenty/Davenport Ranges also offer unique opportunities.

So, with your guidebook, camera or phone, enjoy a slow quiet pace and make the most of this special region has to offer.

BARROW CREEK TELEGRAPH STATION

Barrow Creek was named by explorer John McDouall Stuart in 1860. In 1871, John Ross's Overland Telegraph team selected the site for its surface water and shallow well. By 1880, it featured stone buildings, a blacksmith's hut, cemetery, and a western veranda you can still explore.

NORTH OF TENNANT CREEK

EXPLORERS WAY

REV. JOHN FLYNN

North of Tennant Creek, at the junction of the Stuart and Barkly Highways, is the memorial obelisk constructed to celebrate the local significance of the Rev. John Flynn. A Presbyterian Minister, Flynn surveyed the needs of remote inhabitants of the Northern Territory in 1912. His report led to the creation of the Australian Inland Mission, with Flynn as Superintendent.

Recognising the needs of remote communities, Flynn's efforts resulted in a network of nursing hostels, which grew into the Royal Flying Doctor Service, still providing a 'mantle of safety' in the Outback!

Further south, at Karlu Karlu/Devils Marbles Conservation Reserve, is another story relating to Reverend Flynn (see page 18).

CHURCHILL'S HEAD

Along the Stuart Highway, as you travel this route, you are following in the footsteps of a quarter of a million military servicemen and women who travelled this route during WWII, to defend Australia following the attacks on Darwin in 1942. A natural outcrop of rock resembling Britain's Prime Minister at the time, Winston Churchill, had a tree branch inserted into the rocky 'mouth' to resemble his cigar, cementing the site as a popular military resting spot, still known as Churchill's Head today.

Jones Store, Newcastle Waters

NEWCASTLE WATERS

280 kms north of Tennant Creek on the Stuart Highway, Newcastle Waters is the northern boundary of the Barkly Region. A sealed 3km drive into Newcastle Waters Historic Township shows the this important staging post, with the town providing critical communications in such a remote location. The surviving buildings are worth a visit, along with the Drover's memorial statue paying respect to the critical local cattle industry.
